"Therefore today after school a modest ceremony shall be held"
"On this occasion the Optics Club announces that our clubroom and first floor are ready for an open house" What's this?
"So if you have no conflicting plans we humbly ask for your presence"
Did you see?
I saw.
And you're Arishima-kun the Manga Club's President
Well, if it isn't the Lit. Club President Itou-kun.

W-what are you wearing Tosaka-san?
Woh!
I see that everyone has dressed for the occasion!
Ahem!
I thought he might have been installed as a new cabinet member
Oh...it looks great
A relative of mine is getting married soon
Hm.
Did I need that much of an intro?
If it isn't the "Suddenly disappeared without a trace during the Clubroom Defense Battle" Towaba-san!
Well well
I'm here
Hey Tosaka!

When they make public appearances most prefer to appear in their most treasured outfits
About that...
Will other club alumni be coming?
Frankly, it just gives me a headache
Now, now. I think it looks nice

◎ Those shining eyes! Those burly, sunburned arms! That proudly worn helmet, "Horukaze Divison"!
—The Building Trades Club is said to be the strongest club in all of Horukaze High School. Through after-school manual labor, they work hard and earn money for themselves.
This photo of Shimazaki-kun was taken on site at the beginning of the construction of the Yamaoku Dom. You can see the enthusiasm on his face. At any rate, the one who photographed Shimazaki-kun also traveled with him to the construction site. Senior Tosako must have a lot of free time

Notes

p. 89 "Dokon!"

This mysterious alumnus was dressed as Mole, from a Japanese adaptation of The Wind in the Willows. More specifically, based on the Toad of Toad Hall play by A. A. Milne.

p. 93 "Hanya!"

And this alumnus is dressed a kid's TV show character, Hanimaru, from "Hey! Hanimaru!". It ran from 1983-1989 on NHK. His catchphrase was, can you guess? "Hanya!"
